

A system and method provide distilled water that is precisely re-mineralized to match an individual's current physiological needs. Body-fluid samples are analyzed for targeted minerals and vitamins, software computes an optimal formulation, and precision dispensers add those components to purified water. The personalized product is then bottled and delivered, enabling dynamic, data-driven mineral intake while avoiding deficiencies or excesses.